Important Note: Stanford Zoom requires that all devices participating in a Zoom video conference have encryption turned on. That's automatic for desktops, laptops, and mobile devices, but not always true for room systems. If Zoom participants use a non-UIT supported room system, it is best to test the connection before the meeting. If you have trouble connecting to a room system, contact your local IT support for help setting up encryption on the system, or use Stanford's WebEx service when connecting to that room.
